Health-related quality of life (HRQOL) in adult patients with congenital heart disease. Health-related quality of life (HRQOL) is an important outcome in assessing the healthcare of adult patients with congenital heart disease (CHD), particularly as it has been shown that HRQOL is impaired among many CHD patients. However, there are no clear standard for this outcome across populations and much of the outcome data in the literature are of small sample size. CHD severity, comorbidity and demographic factors, such as marital status and education, have all been associated with HRQOL in adult CHD patients. Research that investigates the predictors of HRQOL in these patients is needed.

. § 41-1643(2), makes explicit the requirement that there be proof that the public agency had actual notice of the defect in the road. Finally, this case is distinguishable from Town of Chula Vista v. Blead, 166 Ariz. 480, 803 P.2d 875 (App. 1990). In that case, this court held that the denial of an extension of time to request a public hearing was neither a decision nor a determination of a substantial defect. Id. at 482, 803 P.2d at 877. The court in Blead quoted section 12-902(A), as follows: It shall be unlawful for any public agency or any officer or employee thereof knowingly to do any of the following: 1. Exceed, limit, abridge, or deny any procedural or substantive right granted by this chapter. In this case, DOT denied a procedural right to a public hearing under section 12-902(A)(1) by denying Harris's request for an extension of time, when this procedural right is granted by chapter 10. The right to a public hearing in this case was not a mere right in the broad sense of the term, but was instead a right granted by chapter 10. Section 12-902(A)(1) provided that when DOT has "actual knowledge of the defect in the road" it "shall cause to be erected and maintained in the public view an appropriate sign designating the defect." (Emphasis added.) Section 12-902(A)(1) granted this right only if DOT had "actual knowledge" of the defect. As Harris points out in her appellee's brief, the "l" in "actual knowledge" can be read to include "it." Thus, DOT had actual knowledge only when it was informed in writing of the defect. I would therefore reverse the superior court and remand with directions to enter a judgment in favor of Harris and against DOT. NOTES [1] The extension application was filed as a "Request For Authorization To Continue Construction By A Deadline Date Of January 8, 1990." The rest of the record suggests that this was a mistake. The record indicates that the term "construction" was used to describe the construction of the guardrail in this case. [2] Such a provision is also contained in § 41-1643(3). [3] These two provisions are also contained in § 41-1643
