"Human beings belonged to no race or continent or any other human grouping," he said. The text was initially released by the Department of Education and Skills yesterday and was later confirmed by the minister Tony Abbott when asked in Parliament whether "racial discrimination is disadvantageous to children", to which he responded "yes". "It's clear that every level of government needs to be absolutely certain that racial discrimination is disadvantageous to children and this is a policy designed to make that absolutely so," Mr Abbott said. An early description of the new edition, released by the department, claimed that "The book [The Australian Race Myth: The Men Who Put It Down] is extremely well-documented, with end notes and references throughout. It documents the historical use and misuse of the racist term 6d1f23a050
